

WHAT WILL IT BE?

It was a sunny morning, and the students at Mouseford Academy were busier than ever. School would be ending soon, and everyone was talking about the same thing: what would the end-of-the-year show be?

This year was especially exciting, because it was the first year of the DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, MUSIC, and DRAMA. Headed by Professor Camille Ratyshnikov, the department was popular with many of the students — including the five THEA SISTERS.

“The show is only a month away!” said Paulina excitedly.

Paulina and the other Thea Sisters were headed across campus to clean up the old greenhouse.

“Well, I heard that the professors are being very secretive about what show we’re doing,” said blond-haired Colette, who carried a box of small rosebushes.

“But we do know that it will be a MUSICAL,” said Violet, who played the violin. “Won’t that be amazing? There will be singing, dancing, DRAMA . . .”

“Tryouts will be INTENSE!” said Pam.

“Definitely,” agreed Nicky. “I need to practice my dance moves. But first, we need to clean up this greenhouse for Professor Rattcliff.”

“It will look so fabumouse when we’re done,” said Colette. “I can’t wait to plant these ROSES.”

“These LIGHTS will look beautiful,” said Violet.

“And so will these Flags, if I can get them apart,” added Pam, looking at the tangled decorations she was carrying.

“The decorations are a great idea,”

Nicky said. “We’re going to bring that old greenhouse back to life!”

Just then, Professor Rosalyn Plié came walking down the path toward them. The professor of DANCE at the academy, she was part of the team involved in planning the musical. She had a worried look on her snout and did not seem to notice the Thea Sisters.

“Good morning, Professor!”

Nicky said.

“Oh, good morning!” replied Professor Plié, stopping in front of them. “I didn’t mean to ignore you. I’m on my way to a meeting for the big year-end show, and I have a lot on my mind.”

“Is it true that it will be a MUSICAL?” asked Violet.

“And if it is, can you give us a hint what it is?” Pam asked. “The Sound of Cheddar? Phantom of the Cheese Factory?”

“Yes, please tell us the title!”

Colette joined in.

Professor Plié sighed. How could she confess to these excited students that she did not have the faintest idea?
